

Grand Rapids Press Coverage of the 2010 Elections

A Report from the Grand Rapids Institute for Information Democracy (GRIID)

Methodology

We tracked the Grand Rapids Press coverage from September 7, 2010 through November 1st, 2010 for all stories about anything that would appear on the November 2nd ballot for those living in West Michigan.

We began on this date since for many political strategists the day after Labor Day is when candidates and campaigns make their “big push” before Election Day. We did not include November 2, Election Day, as many people would have already voted before they saw the paper and there were no additional articles about the Election.

We tracked the number of stories for each race and for all ballot initiatives, both statewide and local ballot initiatives. Whenever a story was printed we looked at sources cited in the story and the focus of each story, such as polling numbers, campaign finance, candidate platforms, endorsements or political ads.

For our study we only monitored the print version of the Grand Rapids Press. Our reasons for doing so is that there are still sectors of the community that only read the print edition and do not have easy access to the Internet.

We also did a comparative study and looked at the amount of ArtPrize coverage during the same 56-day period.

The Grand Rapids Institute for Information Democracy (GRIID) has been tracking election coverage in the West Michigan news media since 1998.

Summary of Findings

- There were a total of 87 Election articles during the 56-day study period.
- The races that received the most article were: 3rd Congressional (21), Governor's race (19) and Proposal to have a Constitutional Convention (9)
- Area State races received limited coverage: 29th District Senate race (4 articles), 75th District House race (3) and no articles about the 28th and 30th Senate races or the 72nd, 73rd, 76th, 77th or 86th District House races.
- There was only 1 article about Proposal 2, 1 article about the Michigan Supreme Court candidates, 1 article about Secretary of State candidates and 1 article about the Attorney General candidates.
- Most of the stories about candidates focused on polling, political ads, debate schedules, public appearances, endorsements and personal attacks.
- Consequently, most of the stories had very little information on candidate platforms, issues or voting records for those running as incumbents or a higher office.
- Comparatively, there were 153 articles about ArtPrize during the same 56-day study period and 87 election articles.
- Election stories appeared on the front page of the Press 18 times during the study period, whereas ArtPrize stories were on the front page 35 times.

Content Analysis

Governor's Race

The 2010 Governor's race featured a battle between Republican candidate Rick Snyder and Democratic candidate Virg Bernero. There were a total of 19 articles about this race from September 7 through November 1st.

The bulk of the articles deal with candidate visits, polling and the debate schedule. Of all 19 stories only four articles focused on candidate positions on the issues and two of these were short summary statements on Right to Work (9/12) and government consolidation (9/19).

The other two article focus on the economy (10/24) and public education (10/30). Even when candidates made local public appearance the articles were soft on issues. Here is a chronological listing of the articles for the Governor's race:

- 9/7 Governor's race: Control starts here – redistricting, money
- 9/11 Bernero at Kent Dems event
- 9/12 The candidates on right-to-work
- 9/18 Snyder, Bernero assemble generalities

- 10/28 Bernero rallies against poll numbers

10/30 Gov. candidates turn eyes to education

11/1 As election nears, Snyder drives home message

3rd Congressional Race

There were a total of 21 articles on the 3rd Congressional race between Republican Justin Amash and Democrat Patrick Miles. Nine of those stories were about political endorsements, 6 dealt with the candidate's claims about personal finance in China, 2 were profile pieces, 2 were about debates, one article was about campaign finances and the last article the Press published on this matter was a mix of campaign finances, candidate claims and endorsements.

Most of the article did not deal with where the candidates stood on issues. For instance, on September 18 the Press ran a story (Congressional candidates debate senior issues) about a candidate debate at Meijer Gardens, which was hosted a group that does advocacy around senior issues. The article does cite claims by both Miles and Amash, particularly on Amash's voting record as a State Representative. However, the Press reporter does not verify any of the claims made by either candidate or look at actual legislation that Amash voted on so that voters could have a more complete understanding of what was at issue.

Considering that candidates running for Congress will be dealing with major economic issues, health care, environmental issues and foreign policy matters, one would think that the Press would report on where the candidates stood on these matters. While it is true that some of these questions were posed to the candidates in their online voter guide and a few of them were part of the October 26 print Voter Guide, these critical domestic and foreign policies issues did not receive the attention that voters require in order to make an informed decision.

Here is a chronological break down of the Press articles for the 3rd Congressional race:

9/18 Congressional candidates debate senior issues

9/20 Longtime GOP backers favor Miles

9/25 Congressional candidates debate over debates

9/26 Amash camp says air attack off-target

9/30 Ehlers throws support to Amash

10/4 Miles lands education support

10/6 Business practices help fuel debate

10/7 China connections

- 10/7 Paul Henry's widow backs Miles
- 10/9 Hoekstra endorses Amash
- 10/12 Miles sells China fund, issues challenge
- 10/15 Amash named rising star
- 10/17 Amash keeps financing edge over Miles
- 10/17 Pat Miles - profile
- 10/20 Miles touts more GOP supporters
- 10/21 Congressional candidates spar over TV claims
- 10/24 Justin Amash - profile
- 10/27 Republicans question Miles' list of GOP support
- 10/29 Amash, Ehlers appear as legislative duo
- 10/31 Amash, Miles bring fireworks

2nd Congressional Race

There were only two articles about the 2nd Congressional race between Democrat Fred Johnson and Republican Bill Huizenga. The October 19 article was merely an announcement about campaign finance data and four upcoming debates between the two candidates.

The second story (10/31) also had some campaign finance data, but mostly focused on which candidate was "better known" in the district. Like the 3rd Congressional race, the coverage of this race did not provide voters with any substantive information on where the candidates stood on issues.

- 10/19 Congressional candidates to debate
- 10/31 Republican stronghold is no sure bet

29th District Senate Race

There were a total of four articles on the race between Republican Dave Hildenbrand and Democrat David LaGrand. One article focused on an endorsement for LaGrand and another dealt with campaign advertising. The October 16 article was a summary of a debate between LaGrand and Hildenbrand where the only issues were raised was some of Hildenbrand's voting record and their respective positions on state funding for the Pure Michigan campaign. Again, the Press reporter did not verify claims made or provide readers with concrete information on Hildenbrand's voting record. The October 24 article was a mix of information on campaign finances, get the vote out efforts and a brief comment from both candidates on the state budget.

9/29 Public safety officers to rally for LaGrand

10/14 Candidates spare over advertising dollars

10/16 Senate candidates pull no punches

10/24 Possible for either to win the 29th

75th State House Race

The 75th State House race featured Democrat Brandon Dillon and Republican Bing Goei. The Press ran a total of three stories on this race with the first one on political attacks, the second one on a dispute over an endorsement and the third article that provided some candidate profile information and where they both stood on taxes. Again, very limited information on where the candidates stood on issues.

9/25 Candidates each deny negative attacks

9/28 Endorsement claim riles House candidate

10/17 75th House race could be close

State Proposals

In many ways this issue received the best coverage of any issue on the ballot. There were a total of nine articles on the ballot proposal to hold another State Constitutional Convention. The articles not only provided reasons to support or oppose such a convention, the Press ran several historical pieces about the last constitutional convention, which provided additional context for the current proposal. The only problem with these articles is that they were bunched together over a four-day period, so if readers missed them they would not have been able to easily access this kind of information.

10/10 Back to Square One?

10/10 How We Got Here

10/10 Don't be on it

- 10/10 State's last convention produced a governor
- 10/10 Convention firsts in 1961 – 62: Women, black delegates included
- 10/11 All Con, No Pro
- 10/11 Yes & No
- 10/12 Con-con low on voters' radar
- 10/13 Former mayor urges support for constitutional convention

In contrast there was only one article on Proposal 2, which would bar felons from holding public office in the future.

- 10/17 Voters asked to ban felons from all state, local offices

General Election Coverage

The bulk of the remaining stories dealt with broad election elements, such as various get out the vote strategies by the political parties, re-districting, debate announcements, local ballot initiatives and local judicial races.

All of these articles can be viewed along with all election stories that we have included in chronological order. Besides the date we also list the page location for each article and the headline. Following these articles are a listing of all the ArtPrize stories that appeared in the Press during the same 56-day study period.
